Others of the band testified to prisoner's good character, and one, Morrison, that they sat on the floor in order to convene more people.

Thomas Practor testified that prisoner confessed to him that Miss Baker had an exercise in the bed room, and he went in and helped her out.

Elder Flaver. Barrier's testified that prisoner did not belong to the Free Will Baptist Church, and was not in fellowship with them.

Joseph Kriohers, of Gariand, testified that he attended one of Damon's meetings at Garland. He behaved well till the meeting was over, and then he fell to kissing and hugging a girl. In Garland it is common report that he is a disturber of the peace.

Much other testimony was received, pro and con, of a similar character, and the prisoner opened his defence.—He cited Luke 7, 36; John 13; last chap in Romans; Philipians 4th; 1st Thes. 3th chap. J. S. Holmes assisted him in his desence. C. L. Chandler and H. O. Morrison argued the cause for the State.

Prisoner again arose and read the 50th and 126th Psalm. He argued that the day of grace had gone by; that the believers were reduced, but that here were too many yet, and that the end of the world would come within a week. The prisoner was sentenced to ten days in the House of Correction, from which sentence he appealed.

On Tuesday, after the trial was concluded, and while the Court was waiting for the counsel to come in, prisoner and his witnesses asked permission, and sung that hymn, by John Craig, beginning—

"While I was down in Egypt's land, I heard my Saviour was at hand; The midnight cry was sounding.

And I wanted to be free.
So I left my former brethren

To sound the jubilee."

These scenes are not ensetted at Atkinson only. In this city, we are informed "gross deeds " are done by one section of these fanatics, for there are two. One worshipping with propriety of conduct, (so far as we know) at Beethoven Hail,—the other at private houser. The latter hold to the "kissing," "washing each other's

New York Legislative Summary.—In the Senatz, on Friday, petitions were presented for the resumption of work on the Genesee Valley canals, complaining of detention of the passengers and mails at Au burn and Syracuse, and the appointment of a railroad commissioner. Mr Folsom introduced a bill to provide for the safe keeping of the cabinets of natural history; also, to incorporate the American Agricultural Association. Mr Forter, a bill concerning the inspectors of flour and meal, pot and pearl aabes, leaf tobacco, and the health officers of the city of New York. The bill was referred to the committee on manufactures, without reading; but we learn that it proceeds upon the principle of paying the fees into the treasury, and allows a salary of $2000 a year. On motion of Mr Chamberlsin, the canal commissioners were requested to state whether they have power to protect the works on the unfinished canals, during the present year. Adjourned.

In the House, a large number of petitions were presented, in teacor not differing from the usual range. An unusual number of bills were reported—among them bills to reduce the rate of interest—to repeal the law of 1837 in relation to usury, and to allow the swearing of the plaintiff in cases where the plea is usury—for the establishment of a Lunatic Asylum in Western New York—to incorporate the Brocklyn City Hospital—to amend the charter of the New York fire insurance company, &c. Among the bills finally passed was the bill to give the people of the several towns the control of licenses to sell spirituous liquors—and the senate bills to amend the R. S. relative to suits on promissory notes and bills of exchange, in relation to suits before justices of the peace. This being resolutions day, the special order—the constitutional amendmenti—was laid aside, and the house was occupied the remainder of the session in considering resolutions. Among these adop, el was one ordering afternoon sessions, commencing on Monday ne and goose shooting upon the Southern Bays of Long Island. Having had not long since some experience in that line of business, and thinking with the incidents connected to the excursion, it will be interesting, I communicate them to you. At certain seasons of the year the above bays are visited by wild fowl in great numbers, and consequently such amusement. With a friend I set out a few days since for the South Beach on a gunning excursion of this kind, in a small skiff with a stiff northwester. The little craft flew before it with her tiny asil—"Le feu Follett" like—We arrived safely and commenced operations, but the day was unfavorable and our success was rather slim. Having concluded to stay upon the beach that night and be ready for it in the morning, went to a fishing hut styled the "Marine Pavillion" in opposition, I suppose, to the magnificent structure at Rockaway bearing that name. We expected to find it unoccupied, but upon opening the door, we saw that it was occupied by some of the baymen sitting before a fine fire. As usual, with this class of persons, they extended to us a hearty welcome, wishing us to feel at home in the "Pavillion." They were a jolly set of fellows—I never shall forget them. They (the south baymen) are a peculiar people and a people much underrated by those who have written concerning them. If you ask one of them to do you a favor, he will not stop to count the cost, but do it. With a plenty of birds, eels and fish around him, and a perfect master of his gun, eel spear and clam rake, he is as independent as the day is long. When we entered, a hot debate was on the carpet as to whether it was right to steal. After a few minutes it was remust go down. She rolled heavily, and the order was given to cut away the masts. We cut the shrowds, and the next roll they went by the board. And there was that pretty fast sailing brig a dismasted water-logged hulk, drifting at the mercy of the waves. But she did not sink any deeper than her deck, on account of her cargo. For four days and five nights, we clung to the wreck. Ships passed us, but we could make no signal on account of our deck being swept—white every now and then the black fin of a hungry shark would make its appearance upon the water, as though he was impatient for his prey; and a pautilus sailed by one day, which brought forcibly to my mind, wrecked as we were, some poetry that I had seen and learned in some book." He then repeated the following lines by Byron, when describing the dangerous vicissitudes of a sailor's lite:—

The tender Nautilus, who steers his prow,
